WILLIAMSON'S CONFESSION.

He Writes Out His Confession and Hands it to Sheriff Smith This Morning.

Preliminary Hearing Waived and He is Sent to Jail Without Bail

A Letter From Illinois Which Williamson Says is True.

Thos. Williamson, the old man who has been in the county jail for the past ten days, charged with the murder of his wife, Jefferson Moore and Chas. Moore, handed the following confession to Sheriff Smith this morn-

Chas. Moore and I had been fussing for about two weeks. We were clearing up some ground. He struck at me with an ax haudie and I struck at him with an ax and missed him. sell Ingrain Carpets an 18c, He then started to run and I struck at him again with the ax and knocked him down, and struck him sgain on the back of the head with the ax and that stroke was the one that killed him. I let him lay and dug a hele by his side where he, laid and buried him, and there is where they found him.

One week later old man Moore and pets, 49 cents, sold elsewhere I had a fuss. He threw a chunk of wood at me which struck me on the head. I threw a flat iron at him and missed him. I went out and got the axe and struck him on the side of the head with it. He turned over Tapestry Brussels carpets and I struck bim on the forehead and killed him, and dragged him out to the celler and threw him in and covered him with dirt the next morning. cents a yard; best brand I staid that night at the house and slept by myself. This all occurred at Moore's house.

My wife was subject to cramp colic and was taken sick with it and and was sick two hours. I gave her vinegar, sa'ts and camphor. It did her no good and she died and I buried her where she was found. The reason I did I was too poor to buy coffin for her. There was no one but myself at the house while she was sick or when I buried her.

THOS. WILLIAMSON.
